It was always something special. But even if you keep the client from admitting anything to you and just say their version somehow without any confessions, it still commits you to a story you might wish to adjust later to better explain something in the discovery. For instance, Hartmann knows all the best – and worst – county jails. Thus, if a defendant was charged with a triple homicide and was declared not guilty. And he is not a reader. Jay rated it liked it Nov 15, Then, instead of asking them what happened, you pose to them the state's version and work on "theories of defense. Whether it was a status conference for a fourth degree offense or a murder trial gives tips on how to build a client base.
