After spending two years in the Army, he graduated from college and went on to become a successful CPA. For a variety of reasons—the lack of space, the inability or unwillingness of a rescuer to take in an entire family, or the decision of the parents not to abandon other family members in the ghetto—many Jewish children went into hiding. In fortunate instances, they found their offspring with the original rescuer.

In some rescuer networks, parents were not permitted to contact their children. I couldn't see myself leaving this house with the rest of the group. Brayer lives in New York and has three grown children and five grandchildren. Cathy-Anne marked it as to-read Apr 13,
