Intellectuals Professor Paul Johnson. It is not so much the talent and style of Hazlitt that I critique in a positive light here, rather than the subjects he chose to explore On the Pleasure of Hating (Penguin Great Ideas) this fine booklet. Seeing all this as I do, and unravelling the web of human life into its various threads of meanness, spite, cowardice, want of feeling, and want of understanding, of indifference towards others and ignorance of ourselves -- seeing custom prevail over all excellence, itself giving way to infamy -- mistaken as I have been in my public and private hopes, calculating others from myself, and calculating wrong; always disappointed where I placed most reliance; the dupe of friendship, and the fool of love; have I not reason to hate and to despise myself?
