Yet they are often wrenched from their rightful function by the taint in man's heart, and hence stand in need of purification. Medieval culture is a culture of religious spirituality and the mortification of the flesh in the name of this spirituality with its orientation on the heavenly kingdom as the highest ideal of earthly existence, to which all the spheres of the life of society are subordinate. In the Middle Ages religion clearly played the dominating role; its values were placed higher than anything .

Inreality,cultureexistsasahistoricallyevolvedsystemcomprisingitsc The truly cultured person shows all these facets in every manifestation of his selfhood. From this point we can begin to discuss the stages of civilisation and its corresponding forms.
