Leading at Light Speed is an essential read for any leader intent on building a high-performing organization. Leaders must design systems which facilitate good decision making or "decision management" within the context of the organization's core values.

It reveals both the fundamental systems at work in high-performing companies. Leaders must find ways to help people overcome their fears and the stifling effects of "group think" to step outside their comfort zones, take risks, and engage in creatively productive thinking. I heartily recommend this well-written, wise guide book to successful leadership and innovation. Goodreads helps you keep track of books you want to read.

Overall this book is a great ready-for-any-business owner. This is a great step-by-step this fascinating book, entrepreneur and business consultant Eric Douglas draws on his work with large and small corporations, public agencies, and non-profit organizations to paint a clear picture of the specific practices that distinguish. How do you build a great organization in a time of accelerating complexity and change?
