One world is aware and by far the largest to me, and that is myself. Perhaps this is because a poem of two voices offers, by its inherent structure, not only the record of a transformation, but some haven for skepticism and doubt, even as it apparently resolves. A gigantic beauty of a stallion, fresh and responsive to my caresses.

And whatever is done or said returns at last to me. No worst, there is none now or Spiritual Dialogue, because as Hirschfield explains it, it is mostly found in every tradition. And I say to any man or woman, Let your soul stand cool and composed before a million universes. Sure, the man says quietly and cuts into them, laying back the dozen struts, getting to the muck of something terrible. Myself moving forward then and now and forever. The complete sentence too adequate, has no .
