This date gets in about four years before Lady Nairne's tinkered copy is either seen or heard of. Otherwise Thomson did not need to print such a note ; neither did he 28 "John" gisguise. George Thomson could doubtless have informed them, but he didn't. Nowfareyeweel,mayainJean! Her reference to Burns is clearly a misleading statement intended to 1 02 make people think that she was the originator and not Burns as had been believed. The only thing that could now be done was to endeavour to arouse a strong suspicion as to the author by some such means as could not well be mistaken, but which at the same time could not be regarded as a direct claim. Asforthegentlemanauthorsoprominentlyreferredto,thereisonlyonegent but a fraction of the modesty claimed for the Baroness Nairne, Mrs Burns would certainly not have given her name with it. It is therefore a great fallacy for pro- fessing authorities to say as they do that no editor of Burns's works has ever claimed the song for .
